INTRODUCING THE NEW BAVARIA SIGNATURE EDITION

The Signature Edition represents a new chapter for BAVARIA YACHTS — one defined not by excess, but by clarity, balance, and thoughtful design.

Every element has been carefully curated to create a yacht that feels complete from the very beginning. Not configured. Not assembled. Simply... resolved.

Effortless by Design

Rather than overwhelming with endless choices, the Signature Edition offers a singular vision:

A yacht specified exactly as it should be.

Each feature has been selected for a reason — to enhance comfort, performance, and life on board — resulting in a harmonious whole where nothing feels unnecessary, and nothing is missing.

A Natural Sense of Value

True value is not created by adding more, but by choosing better.

The Signature Edition brings together the most desirable elements of BAVARIA YACHTS into one coherent package — combining refined design, advanced engineering, and contemporary interiors.

The result is a yacht that feels intuitive to own, both in its design and in the clarity of its offering. The essence of BAVARIA

Available across the BAVARIA CRUISER line and the BAVARIA S-Line, the Signature Edition showcases:

A refined hull design, delivering assured performance

A modern interior, defined by space, light, and understated elegance

Carefully selected equipment, integrated as standard

Each detail contributes to a yacht that feels quietly complete.

Simply Ready

The Signature Edition is not about choosing more. It is about choosing well.

A yacht that is ready when you are —to step aboard, to set course, and to enjoy without hesitation.

POWERBOATING WITH SUNLIGHT? YES!

It's a calm misty morning along the Gota Canal in Sweden. Moored to a dock awaiting our next day's passage, we're making our coffees silently without a generator, just the sounds of the birds and water lapping at the hull of our boat. Later in the morning, we release our mooring lines and silently slip away from the dock. A great blue heron lifts from the water and proceeds to leapfrog us at every river bend for the whole morning as if to keep a watch out over our journey. The only sounds we hear are the birds along the canal banks and the gentle rush of water past our hull.

No, this is not a sailboat! It's our Greenline 39 Hybrid powerboat, "Arco Iris" (translation: "rainbow"). My wife Jane and I are avid boaters. When we retired over a year ago, we wanted to spend as much time as possible exploring the coastlines and waterways of Northern Europe and England. I've skippered various mono-hull and catamarans over time ranging from sailboats to single and twin-engine power boats.

Finding the right balances of a roomy enough beam, low mast height, moderate draught, interior comfort, a highly seaworthy hull, energy efficiency, and environmental responsibility led me quickly away from boats I had previously skippered. Greenline Yachts quickly caught my attention.

The scene described above was one of many memories from our travels around Scandinavia last summer aboard our Greenline 39. Entering anchorages silently, enjoying sunset meals on the stern deck with the tailgate down, and cooking without the rumble and sounds of a genset were all gifts of a hybrid electric propulsion boat. We love the remarkably wide angle views from the main salon where our galley, stern deck, and helm station are all on a single level. We really enjoy cooking together, and the efficient chef's triangle aboard our boat allows us to work together while enjoying the scenery through the stern glass wall. This boat is so much fun to live in, and just as much fun to skipper!

Greenline boats come in a variety of lengths and both hybrid or all-diesel configurations. I chose this particular model because of how cleverly the diesel and hybrid systems are integrated and for the maneuverability and efficiency of its size. The boat cruises silently at 6 knots under the hybrid motor or makes 16-18 knots under diesel. We've found a sweet spot for motoring around 10-12 knots which uses roundly 22 LPH of fuel and gives us a range just shy of 300 nm. But the reality is we tend to really blend the two modes together at varying points of a passage. Even with a cloudy day, the solar panels generate a respectable output, and on a sunny day they can produce up to 15kW a day. What this equated to was a nearly 400 nm passage across Sweden consuming only half of our fuel stores. The Victron energy ecosystem with 26.6 kW of battery capacity gives us immense independence with our passage planning. It's been a delightful experience for us both to have the opportunity for extended time aboard without needing to find shore-based power and fuel sources.

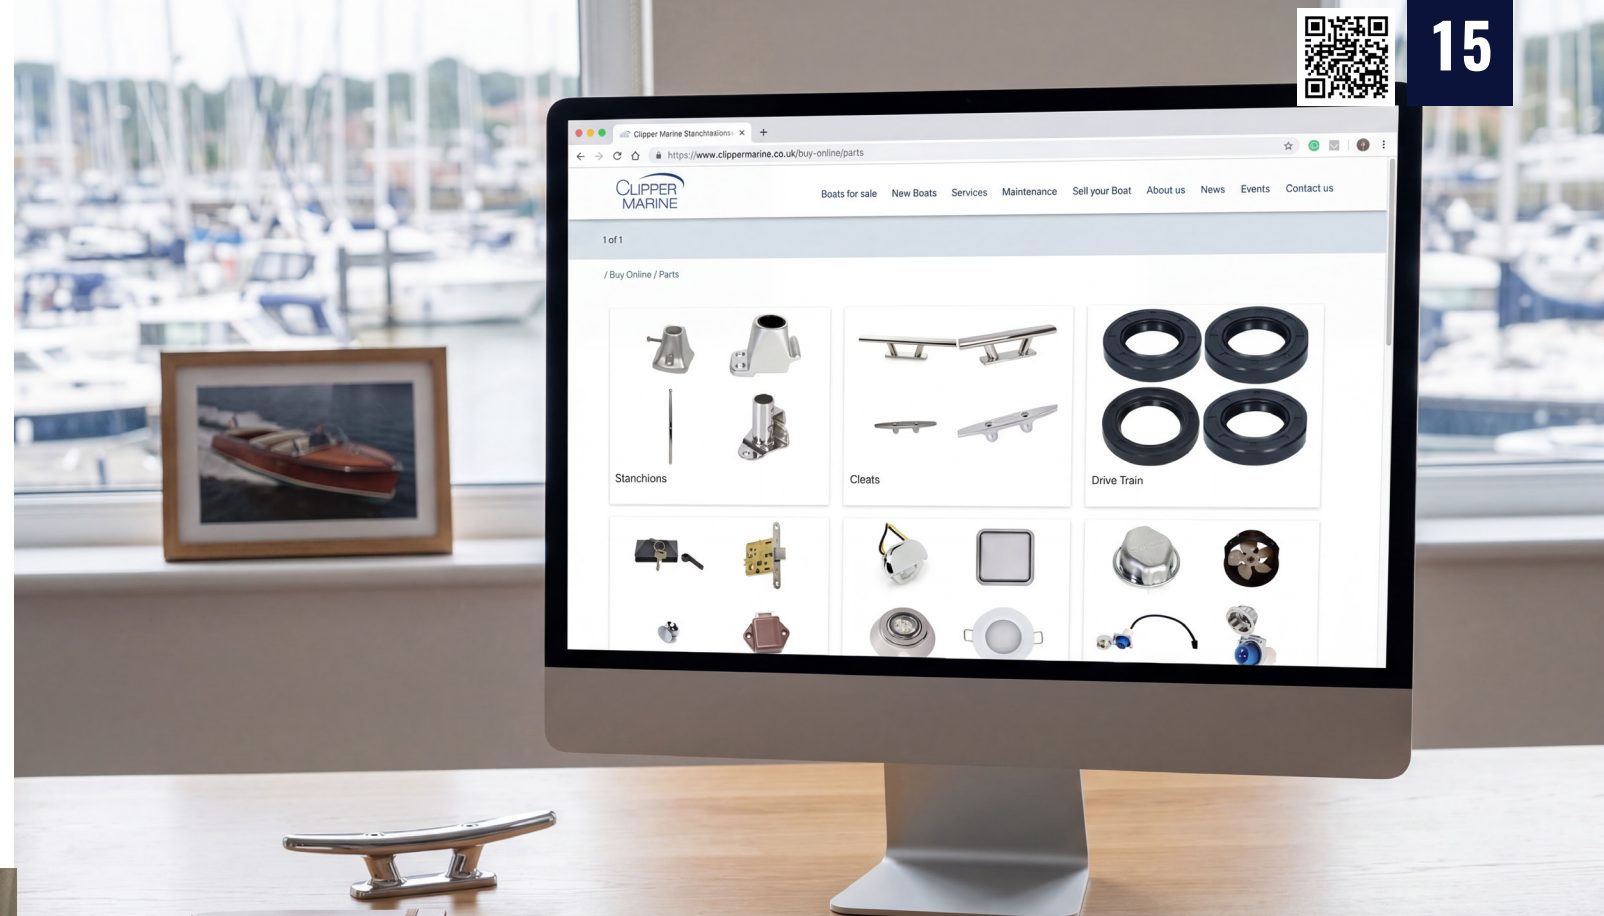

As the Scandinavian winter arrived, we began to turn our attention to planning our adventures around the coastline of England. We had contemplated various options and then decided that we would acquire a second boat to live aboard for the other half of the year when we're not in Scandinavia. The choice of vessels was obvious, a Greenline 39! Enter Clipper Marine.

Jumping between two boats that have the same operating characteristics, the same deck layouts, the same helm stations, and the same on-board equipment was an obvious choice for convenience and even more so for safety. We knew exactly what typical build specs we wanted for our second boat. By the end of months aboard our first Greenline we had built up a wish-list of modifications. I reached out to Clipper Marine and met Ben Nichols, their UK Sales Director. I deeply appreciated his communications and thoughtfulness as we built out the specs of our second Greenline. We were on a tight timeline, build spots were vanishing quickly, and we were hoping to be able to begin our journey on the coast by early spring.

We began the spec process in late September and completed the build agreement in the start of November of 2025. The boat was delivered to Swanwick in early February and handed off to us in early March of 2026. Taking the helm of our new boat, "Lua Azul" (translation: blue moon), for the first time out of the marina felt like holding the hand of an old friend. I couldn't be happier!

We'll begin exploring the southwest coast of England in the coming weeks, and Jane and I can't wait to enjoy many more quiet mornings at anchor with coffees in hands. By the way, I'm done buying boats. Two Greenline 39s is enough!

EXCITING NEWS – OUR ONLINE SHOP IS LAUNCHING SOON

We're pleased to share that our brand-new online shop will be launching very soon, bringing a dedicated range of parts and accessories directly to your fingertips.

Over the past months, we've been working behind the scenes to build a platform that makes it easier than ever to find the right components—whether you're carrying out routine maintenance, upgrading onboard systems, or sourcing those harder-to-find original-style fittings. From deck hardware and interior fittings to electrical components and plumbing parts, the new shop will offer a carefully selected range tailored to support a wide variety of yachts.

Our focus has been on creating a straightforward, user-friendly experience, with clear product information, compatibility guidance, and a structured catalogue that helps you quickly identify the correct parts for your model. We know how important it is to get the right component first time, and the new platform has been designed with that in mind.

As the shop grows, so too will the range of products available, expanding to meet the needs of owners across Bavaria, Greenline, Regal, and Bali yachts. We'll be continually adding new items to broaden the catalogue and better support an ever-growing fleet. In the meantime, if you're looking for a specific part that isn't yet listed, our team will be happy to source it for you.

This launch marks an exciting step forward, allowing us to better support owners, skippers, and maintenance teams with reliable access to high-quality parts.

Keep your eyes peeled—the full launch is just around the corner.
